PREFACE

Speedwriting was introduced to the public in 1923 under the name of Steno Short-Type System. That name was used to signify both shorthand and short-typing. Later, in order to associate it with other works on typewriting and on English, it was called Brief English System of Speedwriting, which name conveys to the mind instant recognition of its character and purpose.

Before the Steno Short-Type System was published, the author had proved that its possibilities for speed on the typewriter were limited only by the capacity of the human voice to speak. Although she was convinced that a machine shorthand was much needed, she realized that its benefits could not be appreciated fully until the distance between conventional stenography, with its arbitrary symbols, and machine shorthand, with its plain-type, was bridged.

Only a system of shorthand that could be used interchangeably—either with pencil or with the typewriter—could bridge this gap successfully. Such a system would not only prove doubly practicable, but it would render the learning of arbitrary combinations unnecessary, and therefore make a special machine only an additional burden and expense.

The author's experience of twenty years in teaching the leading systems of shorthand, her work of training the operators who won the World's Championships on the Stenotype in 1914, and her practice in training a group of high school students who, after seventy days of study, were able to write 115 words a minute, and to transcribe them with fewer than five per cent of errors*—all this experience in the best schools and colleges in America has enabled her to devise a practical system of shorthand that will meet every demand placed upon it.

Since the Steno Short-Type System was offered to the public, its practicability has been justified in every particular, and the author's fullest expectations have been more than realized. But in many ways her greatest satisfaction has come from the testimony of students who have obtained gratifying results by the use of the pencil. These results prove conclusively what folly it is to spend time and energy learning to write arbitrary characters or signs for shorthand—characters which bear not the slightest resemblance to words or syllables for which they stand—when the ABC's, known to every one, can be used for the same purpose, and used more easily and effectively.

Believing that no one who values his time and energy—whether he be business man, doctor, lawyer, teacher, or student—can afford to be without a knowledge of Speedwriting, the only natural method of note-taking, the author submits her system. She is firmly convinced that it will meet a long felt need of those who have been looking for a system embodying ease, simplicity, accuracy, and SPEED.

E. B. D.

New York,
September, 1927.

* An account of this work was written by Mr. J. N. Kimball, Judge of International Contests, who was assisted by Mr. W. F. Oswald and other champions of the Underwood Speed Department. The account was put out in booklet form by the Stenotype Company under the title of "115 WORDS A MINUTE IN 70 DAYS."

SPEEDWRITING HELPS YOU TO USE THAT WHICH YOU ALREADY KNOW

Ever since primitive man set the first equivalent of a kettle on the coals, steam was of course waiting for man's use. Electricity was always about us. Waves of sound were always in the air.

Stephenson, Edison, Marconi did not invent these things. They discovered them, and recognized them with sufficient clarity to spend years of patient toil making them available for general use.

So ever since the alphabet came into being, Speedwriting has lain dormant among its letters. Thousands have felt that it was there—"v" for have, "d" for would, "l" for will. These forms are found in our speech as well.

How often does any one say "I will" except in the marriage service? We say I've, I'll, I'd, etc.

To turn the switch—to turn on the full light of the possibility as contained in the essence of the longhand word—is what Speedwriting has done. It gives more time by saving time. It gives more energy by saving energy. It gives greater efficiency by saving time and energy.

The student who appreciates these facts puts himself into immediate touch and sympathy with the aim of Speedwriting, and he is then ready to begin the subtraction of nonessentials.

PENMANSHIP

In pencil writing, a small, round hand should be cultivated, along with ease of position, and a very definitely controlled motion. Whatever distance the hand travels beyond what is absolutely necessary represents only waste effort on the part of the writer; therefore all unnecessary initial and final strokes should be dropped from the letters. The following letter forms, made by that great penman, Mr. S. E. Bartow, are offered as those which will lend themselves most readily to ease and speed in writing, as well as to accuracy and rapidity in reading.

PHRASING

Both the eye-sweep and the hand-sweep are naturally limited; therefore for the beginner ease in reading, as well as in writing, is produced by breaking the writing lines into a number of pauses. As these pauses conform to the thought to be expressed, they are in no way arbitrary -- in other words the grouping conforms to the spoken phrase. The more experienced writer will make fewer pauses, and this, obviously will increase his speed.

STUDYING

There is a real art in correct studying. If work is much easier than if you attempt to study scientifically, you will find that you conquer your problem by main force alone.

READING

The matter of reading Speedwriting is of as much importance as the matter of writing. It must become a habit with you. Many people form bad mental habits in reading. They find it almost impossible to read without skimming; in other words, impossible to read intelligently and accurately. There is only one way to build up the habit of thoughtful reading, and that is to think while you read. Steady, clear, direct, concentrated thinking is just as necessary to the development of the mind as systematic and forceful exercise is to the development of the muscles of the body.

Have you read “How to Study the Course”? That comes first, and is essential to a right understanding of the work.

Principles

- 1 Omit all silent letters. (know, no : dough, do : rough, rf : die, di)
- 2 When C has the sound of K, write k. (could, kd : cough, kf : college, klj)
- 3 Write t to express T0 in infinitives only, and write the infinitive connectedly.
(to do, tdo : to have, tv : to be, tb : to see, tse : to know, tno)
(Note: Before a noun, pronoun, or adjective, write "to." to bed, tobd : to me, tome : to the, tot)
4 When AS is repeated in a phrase, omit the vowel. (as well as, sls : as long as, slgs)
- 5 A declarative sentence is followed by a period.

* See Principle No. 24 for rule for capitalizing.

Sentences

We know you will like this work.
 Some will like it more than others.
 You will all like it in time.
 There is little for you to do.
 Do that as well as you can.
 We all like to do this work.

*wno ul lk thwk. sol lkt mon Os. ull lkt nti. lrs ll

Write the following in code:.

There is a little work for you to do. Will you do it? This time you can do more than some of the others. Do the work as well as you can for we know you will like it. No other can do the work as well as you can do it. We will do more for you some other time.

(61 words)

VOCABULARY

The twenty-five new words assigned at the beginning of each lesson are not intended for practice study, but rather for reference, as one might use a dictionary. Don't spend very much time studying these words; but after you have glanced over them, and taken in their general outline, as well as the principles for writing them, begin then to read the code in the sentences.

Continue the reading until each word seems clear and distinct to you. In this way you learn to see the words as wholes, and to think of them in their relation to other words in the sentence. This is what makes for rapid and accurate reading as well as for rapid and accurate writing.

Be sure that you can read everything easily before you attempt to write it. You can produce outwardly only what you see inwardly. The inward seeing always precedes the outward writing, and the outward writing is an exact picture of what is seen inwardly. This is true of every situation, for every outside must have an inside. So all you have to do is to look out for the inside, and the outside takes care of itself.

WRITING

The logical way to approach the work is to take the first sentence, "We know you will like this work," and think of the equivalent for each word, writing that equivalent down with pencil. It will appear like this: w n o u l k th wk. Read and re-read these equivalents until they seem logical, natural, and perfectly simple. Then phrase the work, or run the words together, and they will appear to you like this: wno ul lk thwk. Practice these phrases until you can write them easily, smoothly and without conscious effort. Then see how many times you can write this sentence in fifteen seconds.

When you can write this sentence three and one half times in fifteen seconds, you will be writing at the rate of one hundred words a minute. You have then learned seven of the twenty-five words.

Take the next sentence, "Some will like it more than others." Resolve these words into their equivalents by referring to the key-words assigned above, and you will have: so l lk t mo n Os. Again practice reading and re-reading these words until they, too, become a logical and natural part of your experience. Then run the words together, or phrase them, and they will appear to you thus: sol lkt mon Os. Practice this sentence until it can be written easily and smoothly; write it for fifteen seconds, and you will have added five more new words to your experience.

Proceed with each sentence in like manner.

When you have finished the six sentences in the first lesson, you will have written and re-written many times the first twenty-five words, and made them your friends. So easy and natural should they be to you that the words should instantly recall the outline, and the outline should just as instantly suggest the word.

Principles

- 6 Write w to express the sound of medial and final OW. (cow, kw : mouse, mws)
- 7 Write c to express the sound of CH. (chap, cp : check, ck : touch, tc : rich, rc)
- 8 Disregard the spelling in such words as TRY, MY, FEW, NEW, WEIGH, SLEIGH, and write what you hear, which is tri : mi : fu : nu : wa : sla.
- 9 Write l to express final LY, ILY, LEY. (nearly, nel : family, fml : valley, vl)
- 10 An interrogative sentence is followed by a question mark (?).

* See Principle No. 24 for rule for capitalizing.

Sentences

Are you going to work with me now?
 About how much work will you do?
 We had only this work to do over.
 Take more time and do your work well.
 After this you will come to our place.
 Will you come over to our place now?
 And will you go on with my work?

Principles

- 11 When a word-sign and another syllable, or when two word-signs can be used to form a word, do so. (therefore, trf : today, tod)
- 12 Omit AND in such phrases as MORE AND MORE, momo : AGAIN AND AGAIN, agag : OVER AND OVER, VV.
- 13 Write figures to represent all numbers except the numeral "1" when it stands alone.
- 14 Write g to express final ING and THING. (knowing, nog : nothing, ng)
- 15 Write a comma to express the medial or final sound of "ie." (anything, n,g : money, mn,)
- 16 N may safely be omitted in such words as long, lg : thing, tg : ring, rg : sing, sg .

Sentences

Any good thing you like, you can do well. (1)
 Every year there is more and more to do.
 There is some such work for him here now.
 His place is not a long way from here.
 Who would like to go there again with me?
 He will be here in a day or two.
 Before you go out there, will you see me? (1)
 What would they like to do for a year? (72 words)

Punctuation

(Note: The figures in parentheses after sentences refer to the rules of punctuation.)

(1) Use a comma to set off a dependent clause preceding its principal clause. (Ex. When an adverbial clause is put at the beginning of a sentence to secure emphasis, it is called a dependent clause.)

LESSON FOUR

			then.....tn	will (n)....wl

Principles

- 17 Write s to express initial SOME. (something, sg : somehow, sw : sometimes, stis)
- 18 The past tense and also the present participle of many verbs may safely be omitted. (I have worked for you before, ivwk fubf. I am doing well, imdo l.)
- 19 Write v to express final EVER. (whenever, wnv : whoever, hov : however, hmv)
- 20 In most cases t may safely be used to express the sound of TH. (them, tm)
- 21 When final S has the sound of Z, write z. (raise, rz : tease, tz : wise, wz : nose, nz : choose, cz)

(Note: Some authorities hyphenate the words, today, tonight, and tomorrow, but business usage tends toward eliminating the hyphen.)

Sentences

A great many men have been here before you were.
 If he can, this old man will see you when you come.
 When you go into this new place, work with a will.
 There is no new thing to do where we are now.
 But there is so much work, the men do not like it.
 Only an old man can make them do their work well.
 If he was with her up there, we do not know it.
 But we will see her at our place by and by.
 Then if you ever come again, we will see you.

LESSON FIVE

TO THE STUDENT

(Note: You now have the hundred words You can readily see how very important it is of highest frequency in the English language. that you know them thoroughly. It is for These hundred words constitute about sixty this reason that we give you additional practice on them in the next lesson.)

Are you going to do this work for me now? We know you will do it well, and you will like it. We all know what work is like, but there are some who do not know how to do it well. (2) The man who can do things well will make good in everything. Where there is a will, there is a way. The man who makes his way will see into the years before him, and then work up to the place which he sees. Sometimes we come to many a little thing we do not like to do, but all men who have been great have had to do such things many times.

Punctuation

(2) Use a comma to separate co-ordinate clauses, whether independent or dependent, joined by one of the pure conjunctions—and, but, for, or, neither, nor. (Ex. These are called co-ordinate conjunctions, for they join two elements of exactly equal rank.)

(Note: When only words, phrases, or predicate verbs are joined by a co-ordinate conjunction, no comma is used; but when there are two clauses—two ideas—the comma is used to separate them.)

(3) A non-restrictive relative clause introduced by who, which, that, and similar pronouns, is separated from the rest of the sentence by commas. (Ex. The Speaker of the House, who is a Republican, will give the opening address.)

(4) A restrictive relative clause should not be set off by commas. (Ex. The boy who brought it has gone away.)

(Note: A necessary clause is called restrictive, and the additional clause, presenting an additional thought, non-restrictive.)

(5) Words, phrases, or clauses which have a parenthetical function, but for which parenthesis marks or double dashes are not suitable, should be separated from the rest of the sentence by commas. (Ex. The schools of the city, as well as those of the Nation, must be kept free of politics.)

(6) Two independent clauses joined by one of the weaker or less common connectives, such as accordingly, besides, hence, however, moreover, nevertheless, so, still, then, therefore, thus, and the like, are separated by a semicolon. (Ex. The chairman bowed, and the speaker began his address. Then the speaker began his address.)

Principles

- 22 Write y to express the sound of OI. (toy, ty : joy, jy : boil, byl : oil, yl)
 23 Write a comma to express final ST. (past, p, : missed, m, : cost, k,)
 24 Capitalize the principal syllable of a word to add the sound of ER, DER, TER, and THER. (similar, Sml : hearer, He : larger, Lj : order, Or : major, Mj : matter, Ma : mother, Mo)

(Note: The principal syllable of a word is the first syllable of the root word.)

Sentences

The father would not let the boys cut down the large trees.
 They said they would run away from home if they could not.
 They both said they would do just what they liked to do.
 They had their own way, and left us with their heads high.
 We could tell them about another boy who said the same thing.
 He had his head high, but he found at last that it must come down.

He found he must do just as he would have others do.

It is said that, "Boys will be boys, and will run away." (7-8-9)

And, "When these same boys are men, they will know much more."

Another time we will tell you more about these run-away boys. (10)

Principles

- 25 Write p to express medial and final PLE. (cripple, krp : triple, trp : sample, smp)
- 26 Write a shilling mark (/) to express medial and final RT and RD. (card, k/ : heard, h/ : bird, b/ : flirt, fl/ : hurt, h/ : artist, a/ : insert, ns/)
- 27 To form the plural, or to add "s" to words ending in a punctuation symbol, repeat the symbol. (cards, k// : rents, r-- : masts, m,, : classes, kl'': binds, bi-- : blesses, bl'')
- 28 Write Z to express the sound of initial, medial, and final SH. (shadow, Zdo : shoes, Zz : flashy, flZ, : rushing, rZg : mesh, mZ : dish, dZ)

Sentences

You still find people here who will give you a kind word.
 But you should do only what is right by them.
 A man lives and has all his being in his own heart.

The book says, "You shall get back in kind what you give."
 Man did not say this first; it was said for his good. (11)
 This is how some get much more out of life than others.
 The call to love one another came to each one of us.
 To show that our hearts are right, let us say only kind things. (95 words)

Punctuation

- (9) When another mark of punctuation is used with quotation marks, its position depends on whether it belongs to the quoted material only or to the sentence as a whole. A period or a comma always goes within the quotes; other marks go outside unless they properly belong to the quoted material. (Ex. Don't say "ain't"; the correct form is "am not." He asked, "Where shall I go?" Did he say, "We will come"?)
- (10) Compound adjectives should be hyphenated. (Ex. four-story house, ten-acre lot, half-barrel, half-dollar.)
- (11) Use a semicolon between members of a compound sentence that are not joined by a conjunction. (Ex. It is not work that kills men; it is worry.)

Principles

29 Use a hyphen (-) to express the sound of medial or final ND, NT, and MENT.
(band, b- : paint, pa- : lend, l- : sent, s- : raiment, ra- :
sentiment, s-- : front, fr-)

30 Write q to express the sound of medial or final NK. (rink, rq : sink, sq :
rancour, Rq : honk, hq : banquet, bqt)

31 The semicolon (;) may be used to indicate final ITY. (nobility, nb; : oddity, od; : divinity, dvn; : cavity, kv; : laxity, lx;)

(Note: When writing with pen or pencil, the semicolon may be changed to a blend as shown in the word "city" written below.)

Sentences

The boys have been away from home between three and four years.
I think they have been in the city most of the time.

For a while, however, they worked near the city on some land.

A woman owned half the land, and lived there through the year.

She used to pity the boys and tell them that they should go home.

Two women keep the home for the father just as it was.

They do not fail to keep it open both day and night.

They will show you through the house and then leave you.

It is near night, and you think about the world at large.

Sentences

In the end the boys will come back, and all will be well.
 They may find their father at the small turn near the water.
 He likes to pass a part of each day by the side of the water.
 He looks to see the form of one or both of his boys.
 If he sees them even far off, he will run to them.
 He will put his hand upon their heads. He will also call them by name.
 They will look into his eyes and see only the light of love.
 Then they will know why his head is white and his eyes fail.
 It is too soon to say just what the end of this life will be.
 But when we know how to live, we shall find life complete in every way.

TO THE STUDENT

The sentences in this work are arranged for self-dictation. They increase in length as the student's memory is strengthened. While there is no attempt to produce a literary narrative to illustrate each hundred-word group, there is, at least, a central theme, about which the sentences are so grouped as to give a living and interesting reading text suggestive of straight matter. This serves to eliminate interrupted attention, trains the mind to follow continuously a given line of thought, and makes dictation right from the start possible.

Principles

- 35 Use standard abbreviations whenever possible. (company, co : number, no)
- 36 Write a for the sound of AW and AU. (law, la : raw, ra : author, A) (Note: Write o for the same sound if the word is spelled with o.
 Ex. ought, ot)
- 37 Write c/ to express the sound of final NCE and NSE, and also, NCY.
 (dance, dc/ : fence, fc/ : rinse, rc/ : fancy, fc/)
- (Note: When the "ance" sign (c/) occurs medially, omit the slant.
 Ex. pencil, pcl : expensive, xpcv : fencing, fcg : princess, pc')
- (Note: When final "ance" (c/) is preceded by a vowel, omit the c.
 Ex. endurance, ndu/ : continuance, Ku/ : insurance, nsu/)

- 38 Write S to express the sound of STR and combinations of STR. (strike, Si : start, St : destroy, dSy : sterling, Slg : stir, S : restore, rS : disturb, dSb : minister, mnS)
- 39 Write K to express initial CONTIN, CONTRA, CONTRI, CONTRO, COUNTER. (continual, Kul : contract, Kk : contribute, Kb : controversy, Kvs, : counteract, Kak)

Sentences

At the close of a cold day the order came to cross the river.

The company was fully a hundred strong, and made up of the best men.

The man at the head of the company was loved by all his men.

Among the boys were five true friends who had been together since they left school. These boys had once tried to follow the sea, but they did not like it.

In going around the world, however, they saw the poor people of other countries. (86 words)

 " o " " " OR. (orphan, ofn : orchard, oc/ : orb, ob)
 " u " " " UR. (urge, uj : urban, ubn : urchin, ucn)

Sentences

Hard men thought the business of a king was to protect each man's door. (12)
 This made the boys wish they might help the poor people of their own country.
 Coming back home, they set out to care for those who were in want. (16)

But above the call of the poor, came the call of their whole country. They thought it best to arm enough men along the way to hold the line. This plan was made in a room behind closed doors; then they went to bed. (87 words)

Sentences

The hour was late. They had done all they could for the State, yet they could not rest.

They lay there with set faces, and thought what the coming day might bring.

Next morning there might be changes to meet, and there was a constant need of money and horses.

A number of fine men must die if better care were not given them.

With their backs to the wall now, they could never hold out until spring.

But during the long hours of that black night they did not once give up. (89 words)

Principles

- 47 Write y to express medial and final ARY, ERY, IRY, ORY, URY. (momentary, mo-y : finery, fiy : wiry, wy : sorry, sy : luxury, lxy : serious, syx)
- 48 x may be used to express medial and final US, OUS, EOUS, IUS, IOUS, CIOUS, TIOUS. (bonus, bnx: hazardous, hz/x : gorgeous, gjx : gracious, gx : radius, rdx : odious, odx : ambitious, mbx)
- 49 Write x to express the sound of final CIAL, ACIAL, SUAL, TIAL, ATIAL. (crucial, kux : racial, rx : visual, vx : martial, max : palatial, plx)

Sentences

A few days before they were sure their mother would send them help. She would stop at nothing to carry her point, and would begin at once. If need be, she would dress like a girl and walk among the plants. In this way she would be sure to learn the special news of state. Just then a man came on foot, under cover of the night, bringing the news. They read, "At present the King does not mean to try to carry another point." It was enough; in all the round world there was no country like theirs. This is the way they learned that a man does not die because he is poor. He just begins to live when he knows that life is forever.

As they walked, and talked the matter over, they found they could say, even as said another good man of old, "O King, live for ever." (17) (153 words)

Punctuation

- (16) Use a comma to set off absolute phrases. (Ex. Replying to your letter of June 5, I am sending you under another cover the report for which you ask.)
- (17) The sign of direct address (poetic or Biblical) is spelled O. It is always capitalized, and is not followed by punctuation. (Ex. "I fear for thee, O my country.")
- (18) The common interjection is spelled OH. It is capitalized only at the beginning of a sentence, and is followed by an exclamation point, or a comma. (Ex. "Oh, but you must do your work before you go." "Oh! you ought not to do that.")

LESSON FIFTEEN

REVIEW EXERCISE

(Note: The words included in Lessons Eleven, Twelve, Thirteen, and Fourteen comprise the third hundred words of highest frequency in the English language. Sentences

My brother has two dear little children, who are just as happy as they can be.
They play in the field and garden through the warm summer hours, and often stay out until late.

The little child, who is now in her third year, has beautiful yellow hair just like gold.

And her heart is almost as light as the motions of the birds she so loves to talk to.

Her big brother is six years old; therefore he thinks he should lead her.
But she has reached a point now where she feels free to speak her own mind.

Sentences

When I am free, and the weather is clear, I always take the children to the north of the town.

There is a high hill here, and on top of it is a deep wood.

In this wood one does not feel the cold even in early winter.

In this wood is a deep spring, from which we like to draw a drink of water. By the side of this spring today I made a fire and set our table myself. A friend gave us some red apples, and of course we must eat them to please her. The apples are very rich and sweet, and we do not ask for a second one. (114 words)

Sentences

The little girl has power to please the birds, for she is very quick to hear a sound.

Calling the birds and flowers by name, she has paid her respects to all of them.

When she thinks she receives an answer from them, she writes on a rock by the road.

I pay her ten cents each day to add up the marks she puts on the rock.

In this way I hope to train her while she is still young to become quick in adding up to a thousand.

The boy has been playing with his paper ship, and now he has seen it go to pieces on a rock in the water.

The sun is warm, the air is sweet, and the children answer the call of sleep.

Sentences

I sit there alone and think of the few short years since I, too, was a child, playing in the street.

But when I had grown to be a young man, I tried to bear my part in the great World War.

I went across the sea to face death, if need be, in time for the last drive.

I remember how I used to lie there on the ground among those beautiful flowers.

Even though the cause was dear to my heart, I longed to receive a box or a letter from home.

At last I, too, drop off to sleep, and on the wind come more thoughts of the big, wide world.

But now they are all of peace and love, and they fill me with joy.

Today I have learned that thoughts of war and death have no place on the beautiful hills.

We should entertain only thoughts of joy and peace, and let all the world be glad with us.

Principles

59 Write s to express the sound of initial and medial SER. (service, svs : ascertain, astn : survey, sva)

60 Write Ag to express initial AGGRA, AGRE, AGRI. (aggravate, Agva : aggregation, Aggj : agreement, Ag- : disagree, dsAg : agriculture, Agkl)

61 Write Dg to express initial DEGRA, DEGRE. (degrade, Dgd : degree, Dg)

62 A period or question mark repeated at the end of a sentence indicates a new paragraph.

Sentences

Last year I went South for a month to visit a family I had known for several years, and one night we talked over old times.

I was brought up with the son, and when war came, we were sent east to serve in the same company.

It was a burning hot day in summer when we set sail, and the roll of the sea made us look for rain soon.

We did not enjoy the trip over, but we all agreed that the food was very good--good bread, milk, fresh eggs, and sometimes an ear of green corn. (19) (100 words)

Principles

63 Write D to express DETER and DETRI. (determine, Dm : detrimental, D-l)

64 Write Al to express initial and medial ALTER. (alternative, Alnv : unalterable, uAlb)

Sentences

The first week some of us took turns and watched for a mine that might blow us up, but this did not alter our determination to proceed.

We had good reason to fear mines, and every person was ready at all times to save himself from certain destruction.

Most of the boys would laugh and sing, but there were two who would not raise their voices to sing.

They were sure we should never sight land, much less ever reach the front.

At length their fear was so great that they lost their color, and their step was heavy on the floor. (102 words)

- 66 Write Pa to express initial PATER, PATRI, PATRO. (paternal, Panl : patriotic, PaT : patronize, Panz)

Sentences

The whole body of patriotic men came to land one dark night, and I myself was very glad to place my feet on the soft earth once more.

We had to remain there till the next day before we could move up to the front, and even then we could not ride.

While we were waiting, we went into a pretty little church to hear the law of God spoken,—"Love one another as I have loved you."

This plain talk served to give the boys new strength, and took away the bad belief of certain death.

I believe, however, that only once did these two mountain boys leave our presence.

Then it was only long enough to buy a picture and a case of silver to send to their sister. (131 words)

- 68 Write z/ to express the sound of ZURE. (seizure, sz/ : leisure, lz/)

Sentences

But when we got started for the front, these boys of whom I have spoken led the way. They would measure off mile after mile as fast as the very best men, and they did not miss a step.

Do you see out of that window a bank covered with blue flowers? Well, they are going to raise a stone there to mark the place where the general was killed. (20)

He tried to fly low over the chasm; it was a brave act, but it was against the law, and he was brought back dead.

I cannot tell you more of the story today, for tonight we go to a ball given for the soldiers, and tomorrow I shall leave for home.

You have made my stay here very happy, and I thank you for it. I hope you will enjoy your work.

- 71 Write rc to express initial RECLA, RECLI, RECLU. (reclamation, rcncj : recluse, rcs : recline, rcn)
- 72 Separate a proper name from the rest of the sentence.

Sentences

For a few minutes this evening I should like to interest you in the Indian of the West, for he is but little known.

A few years ago we knew little more about him than that he loved the dance, the hunt, and the fight; but today we are studying his home life.

The Indian is tall and straight. He is inclined to dislike work, and he thinks even the heavy work out of doors is fit only for women.

His wife looks upon him as her master; and although he may call her his Wild Rose, his Bright Evening Star, or his Queen of the Night, he does not appear to be kind to her. (21)

We have heard it said that in some of his wild moments, he will even throw her on the ground and beat her. (139 words)

Punctuation

(21) Use the comma between members of a series of nouns, adjectives, or adverbs that are co-ordinate in construction, equal in value, and not connected by conjunctions. (Ex. Men's, youths', and boys' shoes. Red, white, and blue flags. Our government is of the people, by the people, and for the people.)

(Note: The comma is sometimes omitted between the last two members of a series when the conjunction AND is used, but the safer practice is to insert it.)

(Note: Capitalize nouns and adjectives of language or race. Ex. French, German, Chinese, Hindoo.)

Principles

- 73 Write / to express final WARD. (backward, bk/ : forward, f/ : reward, r/)
- 74 Write G to express initial, medial, and final GRAPH, EGRAPH, IGRAPH, OGRAPH, and also GRAM. (graphic, Gk : telegraph, tlg : telegraphic, tlGk : telegrapher, tlGr : photograph, ftG : grammar, Gr : program, pG)

Sentences

The men never decline to make their own clothes. They hang the skins of animals up on a board to dry, after which they make some very fine coats from them.

It is not an easy thing in a twenty-minute talk to finish giving you a graphic description of Indian art.

In the music store one finds the Indian's song of the dance, the march, and the fight.

Through all this music one seems to be able to feel the very thought that is bound to make these men act as one, either in the fight, or in the dance of death.

It is safe to say that in another age the Indian will rise quite as high as any other people in the art of picture writing.

He did this work on a stick or a tree, and began by showing a dog or some other animal in the act of going toward something.

In all cases the picture told a story that could be read by those knowing the signs.

Principles

75 Write i to express initial and medial IM. (impart, ip/ : improve, ipv : unimportant, uip : immodest, id, : immortal, i/l)

Sentences

At great cost to us, we had left important work at our office in order to visit this strange Indian country.

As we stood there at the mouth of the river, just at the break of day, we knew our trip had been worth while.

My friend had been able to purchase a ring and some snowshoes, and I had found a brown coat just the right size for me.

On the march and in the hunt the Indian likes to wear snowshoes, for he can travel very fast in them.

When we held up a picture of a young Indian in the act of trying to corner his dog, the Indian said, "Sir, no sell." (22)

Nor would they sell a picture of a dog about to charge a wild animal, even though we would have been glad to pay seven or eight times what it was worth.

While we did enter the homes of the Indians, they did not ask us to have a seat at their dinner table; but they did ask us to come again. (178 words)

Sentences

Yes, the question of a Great Spirit has already come to the Indians, and in their better pieces of art they try to picture their dream of what He really is.
 (23-24)

The Great Spirit is to them what God is to us. But while they call Him a Great Spirit, they seem to think of Him more as the figure of a man of very large size.

They believe this Great Spirit rules over them, and to Him they take their troubles; and then we are told they offer Him some of their fruit and game.

They hear the voice of the Great Spirit in the cool wind, in the wash of the water on the rocks, and in the songs of the birds; and the cry of the wild animal tells them whose spirit lives within him.

They feel the touch of the Great Spirit in the beautiful flowers and in the bright sky. Thus they can unite in calling their lake, which lies there among the mountains like a sea of glass, "the smile of the Great Spirit." (180 words)

Punctuation

- (22) A substantive used in direct address should be set off by a comma. (Ex. No, my son, it will not do.)
- (23) The words YES and NO should invariably be followed by punctuation. (Ex. "Are you ready to go now?" "Yes, I am ready." "No, I shall not leave home today.")
- (24) Names of the Deity should be capitalized, including the pronouns HE, HIS, and HIM, when they refer to God. (Ex. "God's in His heaven—all's right with the world." "Give unto Him the glory that is due unto His name." "For He is our God; and we are the people of His pasture, and the sheep of His hand.")

78 Write El to express initial ELECTRI, ELECTRO. (electric, Elk : electrocute, Elku: electricity, Els; : electrician, Elj : electrify, Elf)

Sentences

Oh, the Christmas bells are ringing! (25) Let us have a quiet little party and surprise our neighbor on the farm.

There happens to be a full moon now, and we can gather on the middle shore road and cross over to the island on the ice.

Those who live in the City will find it a delightful change from the subway and electric trains.

We can spread the news direct to the different neighbors, and perhaps we can first have a meeting in the hall.

We will promise that the hall shall be kept clean and that the service shall deal only with the points already brought out. (108 words)

Sentences

You see, the gentle little lady at the farm fell on the ice last week and nearly broke her leg.

She was found at the gate of the fish market one night in a heavy storm.

At first we could not account for her being there in that strange spot; neither could we understand the nature of her interest in those people.

At last it came to us that this was the Christmas season and that our great and wise Teacher had given the firm command, "Feed my sheep"; then we knew that she had taken this opportunity to do her duty and to be a true neighbor to those who were in need.

The next day our inquiries proved that we were, indeed, correct. (125 words)

- 82 Write Sg to express SIGNA, SIGNE, and SIGNI. (signal, Sgl : signet, Sgt : signify, Sgf)

Sentences

We sent a note to Mr. Brown, and he said that since the strike the common people did not continue to buy so much fish as before, for he could not allow them to run up a bill. (26)

He also said that his baby daughter had been in need of a thick coat, his wife a hat, and he a suit of clothes.

He told us that he was too proud to ask for help; that the lady's magnificent present came as a perfect surprise to him; and that it would teach him a lesson he would never forget.

We asked Mr. Brown to tell us more about the strike, and he said that he thought the fellows did not understand the meaning of the cloud that hung over them.

He seemed to think the government would be slow in trying to force the men to work, and that the court would not act except to see that every man had a square deal.

PrincipleSentences

At the meeting tonight I suppose the whole sad story will be told, and I can only wonder how many we can count on to shed a tear for the wrongs that have been done these men.

We never tire of hearing the old story about the good seed that brought forth fruit after its kind; and how the truth does shine in the darkness, even though we see it not.

It should be a pleasure and satisfaction to lose sight of self; and if we do that, we shall divide the bill on this page among us, giving to each what belongs to him.

Then we can say in a true Christmas spirit, "Unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given; and the government shall be upon his shoulder; and his name shall be called Wonderful, Counsellor, The mighty God, The everlasting Father, The Prince of Peace."

Sentences

The Nation had called, and there was no doubt in my own mind that I was in honor bound to join the army, and that at once.

I had felt for some time that there was nothing else for us to do; but I did not expect so sudden a call, and therefore, I was not prepared for the immediate labor before me.

We were told that they were going to rush an army to England and to have the men trained there by those who had been in the heat of battle.

This would give us an equal show with the men of other nations beside whom we were to fight as soon as we should arrive on French soil.

As I sat there in my chair that afternoon, I could not seem to settle upon any branch of the service I wished to enter. (146 words)

For the next quarter of an hour or more I tried to pull myself together and to decide on some definite line to follow.

Just before noon that day a gentleman friend of mine had come in and brought me a pair of field glasses, and asked me to pack my bag and spend a week with him down in the country studying particular kinds of birds.

This would have been rather an easy and convenient way to wait and let time decide the matter for me, but I would have none of it.

I judge that I must have sat there more than an hour looking for some simple sign that would indicate the narrow path necessary to take for the public good.

I could appreciate that there must be the least possible delay, for to wait would only help destroy our chances to win.

Sentences

I made a list of those lines in which, in my opinion, I could best serve my country, and first in line was music.

I loved music dearly, and I had been given much training in that line.

Even as a boy I would hide in the old gray mill and spend hours playing on the bones.

My mother used to hunt me up and tell me that instead of doing this I must attend to my class work.

I could not bear to see my mother suffer; so I would bow to her wish and busy myself with a lot of work I saw no value in.

It seemed to be born in my blood to love band music; and the call was so loud and strong that I felt that I could meet it in only one way.

I had no desire to hide behind my love for music to keep me from drinking the cup that others must drink, and of paying the price, pound for pound, that others must pay.

In no way, shape, nor manner did I wish to do this; and yet I did not quite dare to go out of that building and signify my decision to enter the band organization.

Sentences

That night I went across the yard to see a sick friend who had only that day arrived on the transport from England.

I guess you will understand my delight when he told me that, next to a good cook, a good band did more than anything else to keep up the spirits of the men. —

He said that nine out of ten men would cover more distance to music, whether in the march or the drill, than they would without it.

And if they were called upon to go down into the valley where great waves of fear would surround them, even to the edge of the hereafter, music would give them strength of soul as nothing else would.

Then they could raise their eyes to heaven and say, "Thou, O Lord, art my resting place; in Thee do I trust, for Thy grace is sufficient for me."

I was very glad and thankful for his point of view, for it contained the meat of my own thought in the matter.

87 Write K to express final ACLE, ECKLE, ICAL, ICLE, UCKLE. (tabernacle, tbnK : speckle, spK : physical, fsK : particle, p/K : buckle, bK)

Sentences

As soon as I made my decision to continue my musical career, I went at once to the station to express my purpose.

To my complete surprise, the officer in charge was a captain whom I recognized as a farmer boy I had known in earlier years.

As boys together we used to mount our wheels and ride out twelve miles along the coast to the home of my uncle.

He had built us a boat, and into the bottom of that we would put a basket, containing a supply of bread and butter, nice cold tongue, and sugar cake.

Then we would row across the bay, and up Broad Brook, which was broad in name only, for it was really but a narrow stream. (125 words)

 Xr : extirpate, Xpa : extradite, Xdi : extreme, Xm : extricate, Xka :
 extrude, Xd : extraneous, Xx : extraordinary, Xy)

Sentences

When the water was still, we would catch a basket of fish, cook them in the sand on the beach, and include them in our lunch.

Mrs. Grant used to own the large farm on the banks of this stream.

Her husband was a doctor. One day when they were out in their car, he ran into a telegraph pole and hurt his neck.

When they picked up Mrs. Grant, they were afraid she had broken her finger, but she took no notice of it, and very soon the finger was all right.

The doctor, however, was ill for a long time. He grew extremely thin; in fact, he seemed to be wasting away.

Every time we went to call on Mrs. Grant, we were careful to choose the very best fish from our basket, and take them to her husband for a gift. (144 words)

- 89 Write m to express initial and medial EM, UM. (emphasize, mfsz : emphatic, mft : umpire, mpi : unemployed, umpy)

Sentences

As I stood there before the Captain, it seemed but yesterday that we used to look forward to our usual visits to the farm.

After the important business was over, we sat down to smoke and talk over old times. The Captain was very tall, and looked like a prince. But at the moment he seemed to me to be just the height of the golden grain, along by the side of which we used to race with pure joy to find the cow for Mrs. Grant.

We were inclined to give up our entire time to the service of Mrs. Grant; and when we stood before her, cloth cap in hand, we looked upon any service for her as a gracious favor extended to us.

The cow used to jump over the fence to get a taste of wheat, and she became very fat.

Mrs. Grant used to declare emphatically that she would have to tie up the beast.

TO THE STUDENT

When you are timing your speed on these until you are thoroughly familiar with it, sentences, if some combination of letters seems and practice it until it no longer is an enemy rather difficult to you, or seems to slow down to your speed, but is a friend that will work your speed, take that phrase out to one side for you. Use everything you learn to-day.

Sentences

Years had passed since either of us had visited the place; yet as the subject was brought up, we looked back on that old farm as a boyhood paradise.

The Captain was going to enter the air service in the American army; and he said they would require more ambitious men, men whom they could recommend to make photographs of the enemy.

He tried to impress upon me my unusual qualifications for that branch of the service; and in order to increase my interest, he even showed me the wings of the aeroplane made of silk.

But he seemed glad when I told him that I wished to enter the band, because I thought I could bring more beauty and peace into the lives of the men, and bless them more in that way than in any other.

When the clock struck the hour, I found it very hard to kiss my mother goodbye and separate myself from the home nest.

Even my old dog put his nose between my knees, and beat the oak floor with his tail, as much as to say that he would be glad to go with me to carry part of my load.

I had been a member of the New York Stock Exchange for many years, and I used to make classifications of the trade reports of the United States.

In the present serious condition of our domestic and international relations, I could not allow any article or circumstance of interest to escape my attention.

I used to hurry through my breakfast, jump into my car, and rush from the village across the bridge to my office in the city.

Here I would seize my mail and newspapers to see if I could discover any bit of information that would guide me in my very natural desire to help France.

Sentences

The great American eagle was now joined with the lion of England in helping France guard the troops at the front.

At this date the famous German Army under the Crown Prince was in the lower forest, and the French and Americans were considering how they could circle around outside of the forest.

They were confident they could, at the proper moment, successfully destroy his entire force, and thus retrieve their lost position.

Some of our men were almost blind with fever, others continually cried with pain, and many of them were so weak from ill health that they could hardly stand; yet when we told them to recline on the grass in the shade, they showed an antagonistic attitude.

Sentences

It was only natural for the crowd to distrust the enemy, and to demand that we practice the same iron rules on him that he practiced; but neither the shouts from the roof nor the noise from the shops made any difference in the object our men had in view when they crossed the ocean.

No pen can ever properly paint the heartlessness and needless severity that history will have to record of the amount of suffering among the men throughout every inch of that journey.

Nor did our soldiers seek to have us lift the weight that had been placed upon their shoulders.

But we don't wish to shut our eyes to the fact that, while we lost many men, the loss of the French and English was more than double that of ours in the same space of time.

Sentences

According to the reports that have come from Europe, all agree that America with her two million men did much to advance the cause of liberty and to establish peace on the continent.

But we should not take advantage of the fact that we were able to help our friends in their distress.

The cause of justice should be equally dear to the hearts of all men. What blesses one blesses all; therefore our action in this matter was a benefit to ourselves, as well as to our friends across the sea.

Whatever we do, whether it be little or much, it must be done with no thought of personal aggrandizement and with no ulterior motive.

We cannot isolate ourselves from other nations today, and therefore we must accept our full share of responsibility in trying to advance the message of freedom, until every lip can speak it in whatever language or tongue it is written.

GROWTH

Individual growth comes only through the exercise and development of the creative ability within each. An endless copying of the words and thoughts of others does not tend to the highest development. We create by means of thought. We think only in words. When we take words and use them to express a thought of our own, we make or create something which is in and of ourselves. This is following the natural law of growth, which is all from within out, and not from without in.

While all potentiality is within each, the individual uses only that which he is conscious of possessing; he cannot use that which another possesses; therefore an awakened consciousness is essential. This awakening comes, not by having all the thoughts ready-made, but through the individual's own active, constructive, purposive thinking. Just as we learn to do by doing, so we learn to think by thinking.

PERFECT WORK

Perfection is the goal to be reached. It should be the ultimate and not the primitive requirement. All that anyone can express today is the best that is within him; but the law of growth, the law of individual unfold-ment, demands that the best of today be made a little better tomorrow. Herein lies the road to success. May you enjoy to the fullest traveling this road, and reap all the benefits to be derived therefrom.

LESSON FIFTY-ONE

Sentences

This work in Speedwriting is submitted as the practical formula for the solution of all the problems of the overworked stenographer.

The development of a science is only the discovery of what is already in existence. The introduction and presentation of the principles of this system to your consciousness should be appreciated and accepted.

You should remain in a receptive attitude while studying this subject. Your understanding will thereby be quickened.

If you are especially discerning, you may learn to be a Speedwriter of prominent standing in an incredibly short time.

The first few lessons are made up of the words of high frequency in the vocabulary of the ordinary individual. (111 words)

TO THE STUDENT

The words given in this book are those of unusual occurrence. They are used simply to illustrate the more difficult matter which every shorthand writer occasionally encounters. A knowledge of shorthand is incomplete until the writing and reading of these words becomes familiar.

There are two ways of approaching this phase of the work. One, the hard, long way; the other, the easy and interesting way. If the student attempts to learn these words merely as words, and tries to remember how to write them just as single words; then he has chosen the hard, long way. But if he will take these words and resolve them into their component parts; in other words, pick them to pieces, and see how they are made up; then he will find that he knows already how to write the different parts, and this way lets in the light. Then the word is no longer a stranger to him. He sees it only as a combination of old friends that he has been using for a long time. This is the easy and interesting way. Try it.

LESSON FIFTY-TWO

Principle

102 Write A to express initial ATTRA, ATTRI, ATRO. (attractive, Akv : attribute, Abu : atrocious, Ax)

Sentences

The most important part of this work is gaining the use of a sufficiently extensive vocabulary to meet the demands of any situation.

One should strive to add daily to his vocabulary at least twenty-five new words.

By ascertaining the meaning and significance of such words, one becomes wonderfully resourceful and successful in his work.

One can tabulate and manipulate the principles of this system after a very few weeks of study, meditation, and practical application.

This work is constructed for the occupancy of the student of average mentality for about three months.

One can meditate on the component parts of these principles, and apply them inaudibly, even while walking on the street.

One should accomplish something of importance for every hour spent; in other words, "Fill each unforgiving minute with sixty seconds' worth of distance run."

To be for one's best interest a thing must contribute toward satisfaction, and to be so contributive, it must tend toward conserving the individual.

The things that conserve the individual are cheerfulness, intelligence, and all concordant and successful attributes.

You must be your own schoolmaster; you must recognize that you are always in need of wisdom, and you must be ready to practice any severities against yourself in order to gain this end.

Indolence is the curse of man. Mental indolence is incredulity, on which some pride themselves; they call it skepticism, and talk of the reign of reason.

LESSON FIFTY-THREE

Principle

- 103 Write i; to express final ITIS. (bronchitis, bqi; : laryngitis, lji; : tonsillitis, tci;)

Sentences

Increased subtlety of sensation means increased vividness. For instance, a man of sensibility and imagination feels more in consequence of the unfaithfulness or faithfulness of a friend, than can a man of even the grossest physical nature feel through the medium of the senses.

The universe is full of magnificent promise for us if we will but lift our eyes and see.

It is that lifting of the eyes of the mentality that is the first need and the first difficulty.

It is the essential characteristic of the man of genius that he is comparatively indifferent to that fruit which is within his reach, and hungers for that which is afar on the hills.

We are content, for the most part, to go on in an aimless way, without any idea of a goal, or understanding of which way we are going.

When a man first becomes aware of this aimlessness, and is dimly conscious that he is working with great and constant efforts, then descends on him the misery of disillusionment.

In what direction does your goal lie? Up the Hill of Difficulty, or down where the path is easy and smooth?

The man who chooses the way of effort, and refuses to allow the sleep of indolence to dull his soul, finds in his work a new and finer pleasure each day.

LESSON FIFTY-FOUR

And now let us consider how the initial difficulty of fastening the interest on that which is desired, is to be overcome. Needing this positively, we shall surely find the way.

If you turn your mind upon any given subject with sufficient concentration, you will receive illumination with regard to it sooner or later.

There is no way of acquiring this knowledge, or of using it when it is acquired, except by the exercise of the will. Will is the power of volition, and is resident in the mentality.

Do not resist nor resent the circumstances of life any more than the plants resent the rain and the wind.

Nature is always consistent, even though she feigns to contravene her own laws.

Greatness in man is popularly supposed to be a thing inborn, but as a matter of fact, greatness can only be attained by growth.

The man who is strong utters no idle words, he does no unconsidered act, he neglects no duty of office however homely or however difficult.

To establish sufficient determination to accomplish a thing, one must have a fixed purpose, or resolution.

Determination prompts one to attend to the things that must be done, to accomplish the thing which one has determined.

The heart is the directive and distributive center of the individual, and it is also the pulsative center of the universe.

"Where thy treasure is, there will thy heart be also."

LESSON FIFTY-FIVE

Principles

 105 Write Ml to express initial MULTI. (multigraph, Mlg : multitude, Mltu)
 106 Write Me to express initial and final METER, METRI. (kilometer, klMe :

 107 Write ol to express OLOGY. (theology, teol : biology, bol : geology, jol)

Sentences

Light is natural electricity. The electrical switchboard connects all the wires of an intricate system at a single source. We can use this power by means of various instruments.

Hydrostatics is the science of fluids at rest; while hydraulics is the science of fluids in motion.

The essential excellence of the metric system is the multiplication and subdivision of the fundamental unit of length--the meter--according to universal decimal notation.

The liter is the fundamental unit of capacity.

We should make a supreme effort to master this system, and to alter our own system to conform to it.

All activity and all development are expressions of perceptions. Perceptions include all things one does, hears, feels, tastes, or smells.

One arrives at the soundness and truth of a proposition through a compilation, combination, computation, classification, and condensation of facts. One also learns much by analogy. (146 words)

108 Write N to express final ANTIC, ENTIC. (frantic, fN : authentic, atN)

Sentences

With great tenacity of purpose and generosity of soul we are right now striving to bring the backward peoples of the earth into closer domestic relations with us.

We do not wish to antagonize them in any way; instead we wish to remove all suspicion from their minds.

In doing this work, we are constrained by an uncontrollable desire to extricate these countless multitudes from their superimposed sense of materiality.

If it should transpire that we were able to reclaim these people, and reinstate them in the family of nations, I declare to you that it would constitute the most patriotic service this country has ever contributed to the progress of the world.

In this work we must not alternate between hope and despair, but must work with uninterrupted zeal to retrieve all previous mistakes.

It would be a calamity to allow any inanity or pusillanimity on our part to deter us.

The principle of the brotherhood of man is what binds together nations, as well as individuals, and institutions.

This is the ultimate aim of our work, and it is the most gigantic proposition ever presented to the public.

LESSON FIFTY-SEVEN

Letters

Mr. William Meyer
325 Fifth Avenue
New York

My dear Mr. Meyer

GROW or GO

That's the very spirit of the times. In fact, it's the decree of Nature, herself.

What isn't growing is going--going back to whence it came.

What are you doing--growing or going?

I won't ask you if you are accumulating about you more resources--but---

Are you using to the best advantage the resources you have?

The wise financier doesn't run around to see how he can keep from spending a dollar.

He looks for ways to spend it so that it brings him in the largest dividends possible.

The wise business man doesn't look to see how he can keep from doing work. He tries to see how he can do more work and better work in the same space of time.

The closed hand can't receive. The closed mind can't learn. It is the open hand that receives, and the open mind that learns--that grows.

You have resources now at your command--in the plain ABC's of the English language--that will save you 70 per cent of the time and effort you would ordinarily devote to longhand note-taking. Are you using them?

Sincerely yours

Punctuation

- (27) Commas are unnecessary at the end of the lines composing an inside address or envelope superscription, although the more conservative practice is to include them there. The tendency in business, however, is to omit punctuation where separations are indicated by other means.

LESSON FIFTY-EIGHT

AUSTEN, MICHAELS & CO.

Mr. William B. Cutler
17 Market Street
New Haven, Conn.

My dear Mr. Cutler

I call your personal attention to the enclosed statement showing a balance of $625 due us since November 1st.

The fact that you have so often availed yourself of our discount of 2 per cent for cash in 10 days, or 30 days net, would make it seem unnecessary for us to remind you of our terms now. But the further fact that, during the twenty years you have been a customer of ours, with annual purchases approximating $1500, you have never once allowed your bill to run like this, makes it very hard to reconcile.

I assure you that I have not for one moment lost confidence in your integrity; neither can I believe that it is simply a case of oversight on your part. I further note that you have made no purchases during these last three months. All this leads me to infer that you may be in difficulties of some sort. If you are, won't you take us into your confidence to the extent that we may make everything just as easy for you as possible?

I feel that this much confidence is due us, and I assure you it will be respected and appreciated.

Very truly yours

Letter Forms in the United States

The best usage decrees that every citizen is entitled to be addressed as Mr., Mrs., or Miss, and men in a firm to be called Messrs. To omit these titles is a discourtesy which should not be permitted, even though the omission may save a good deal of time.

Dear Sir or Dear Madam are decidedly stiff and formal; they haven't the warmth typical of real life; they are not applicable to personal conversation; and therefore they should be used only in very formal address, or where the name of the individual addressed is unknown.

Dear Mr. Jones, and Dear Miss Smith are all right for friends or business associates of long standing, but such a familiar address could hardly be used to the stranger or the business associate of short acquaintance. My dear Mr. Jones, or My dear Miss Smith is a much safer form of address.

Letter Forms in Great Britain

In Great Britain different forms prevail. If a man is of good social and business standing, he should not be addressed as "Mr. C. E. Chandler," but as "C. E. Chandler, Esq."

"Dear Sir," or "Dear Madam" is the correct salutation to a business letter, unless it is to a firm, in which case use "Gentlemen."

A business letter should close with "Faithfully yours" or "Yours faithfully"—a personal letter can close with "Yours sincerely."

LESSON FIFTY-NINE

AUSTEN, MICHAELS & CO.
161 Hudson St.
New York

February 15, 1925

Mr. William B. Cutler
17 Market Street
New Haven, Conn.

My dear Mr. Cutler

It is with a feeling of genuine anxiety that I again write you regarding your long over-due balance of $625. I assure you that this anxiety is not primarily over what I look upon as the very remote possibility of losing that amount of money. But the possibility that a valued customer of twenty years' standing, a man whom we have always held in such high esteem, may be in trouble, either financial or personal, and fail to allow us to so much as lend him our moral support, is indeed a reflection on the friendly relations we have always supposed existed between us.

Did you ever read Riley's little poem, "In a Friendly Sort of Way"? "What," you say, "mixing business and sentiment!" Yes, you have the idea exactly. I have always found that it pays in the saving of human energy, in the wear and tear of this business life, to mix in a little sentiment just for a lubricant, you know.

Now, Mr. Cutler, whatever your problem is, just remember that you can always "Feel our hand upon your shoulder, in a friendly sort of way." That is just what a long-tried acquaintance and friendship such as ours means to us, and we hope it doesn't mean less to you. So please let me hear from you by return mail, and rest assured that Austen, Michaels & Co. believe in standing by their friends.

Sincerely yours

A MESSAGE TO GARCIA

When war broke out between Spain and the United States, it was very necessary to communicate quickly with the leader of the Insurgents. Garcia was somewhere in the mountain fastnesses of Cuba--no one knew where. No mail or telegraph message could reach him. The President must secure his co-operation, and quickly.

What to do!

Some one said to the President, "There's a fellow by the name of Rowan will find Garcia for you, if anybody can."

Rowan was sent for and given a letter to be delivered to Garcia. How "the fellow by the name of Rowan" took the letter, sealed it up in an oilskin pouch, strapped it over his heart, in four days landed by night off the coast of Cuba from an open boat, disappeared into the jungle, and in three weeks came out on the other side of the island, having traversed a hostile country on foot and delivered his letter to Garcia, are things I have no special desire to tell in detail.

The point I wish to make is this: McKinley gave Rowan a letter to be delivered to Garcia; Rowan took the letter and did not ask, "Where is he at?" By the Eternal! there is a man whose form should be cast in deathless bronze and the statue placed in every college of the land. It is not book-learning young men need, nor instruction about this and that, but a stiffening of the vertebrae which will cause them to be loyal to a trust, to act promptly, concentrate their energies; do the thing--"Carry a message to Garcia!"

General Garcia is dead now, but there are other Garcias.

No man who has endeavored to carry out an enterprise where many hands were needed but has been well-nigh appalled at times, by the imbecility of the average man--the inability or unwillingness to concentrate on a thing and do it. Slipshod assistance, foolish inattention, dowdy indifference, and half-hearted work seem the rule; and no man succeeds unless by hook or crook or threat he forces or bribes other men to assist him; or mayhap, God in His goodness performs a miracle and sends him an Angel of Light for an assistant. . . .

And this incapacity for independent action, this moral stupidity, this infirmity of the will, this unwillingness to cheerfully catch hold and lift, are the things that put pure Socialism so far into the future. If men will not act for themselves, what will they do when the benefit of their effort is for all? . . .

My heart goes out to the man who does his work when the "boss" is away as well as when he is at home. And the man, who, when given a letter for Garcia, quietly takes the missive, without asking any idiotic questions and with no lurking intention of chucking it into the nearest sewer, or of doing aught else but deliver it, never gets "laid off," nor has to go on a strike for higher wages. Civilization is one long anxious search for just such individuals. Anything such a man asks shall be granted; his kind is so rare that no employer can afford to let him go. He is wanted in every city, town, and village--in every office, shop, store, and factory. The world cries out for such; he is needed, and needed badly--the man who can carry a message to Garcia.--ELBERT HUBBARD (575 words)
